State Solo-Esemble Contest Continues Monday

Ensemble music has been the focus of the State Solo-Esemble Contest since its inception in 1967. This year, the contest was held at the University of Texas at Austin, where it drew more than 1,200 high school musicians from across the state.

The contest, which is one of the largest of its kind in the country, provides a unique opportunity for young musicians to showcase their talents and compete for national recognition.

Participants in the contest are divided into several categories, including solo and ensemble performances. The contest is held over a period of several days, with participants performing in front of a panel of judges.

The contest is a highly competitive event, and participants are encouraged to prepare thoroughly for their performances. The contest is a great way for young musicians to gain experience and receive feedback from professional musicians.

Another James Joyce Among Them?

At age 22, he was one of the youngest winners in the history of the contest. Many of his songs, including the best-known "The Ballad of the Windmill," have become staples of the contest's repertoire.

Castle Creek Performer

Somehow between Bob Dylan and James Taylor is the niche of singer-composer Tower Van Zandt. His music is a blend of folk, rock, and country, and he has become a favorite of the Austin music scene.

Van Zandt's music is characterized by its raw energy and emotional depth. He has released several albums and has performed at numerous venues, including the iconic Austin venue, the Continental.
