

More New Wave at Cellar Door

The new wave sounds of John Cale will rock the Cellar Door (1210 34th street N.W., 202-337-3389) today and tomorrow, followed by jazz-fusion artists Brian Auger and the Search Party Sunday and Monday, the Hely Treece Band Tuesday and Wednesday and Townes Van Zant next Friday and March 1.

At the Kennedy Center (2700 F street, N.W., 202-254-3600 for information, 202-857-0900 to charge tickets):

In the Eisenhower Theatre: "Clothes for a Summer Hotel" by Tennessee Williams will continue through tomorrow. "The Elephant Man" by Bernard Pomerance will open Tuesday and continue through April 5.

In the Concert Hall, the National Symphony Orchestra will appear today and from Tuesday through next Friday, with pianist Peter Serkin scheduled today, pianist Aldo Ciccolini and cellist Nathan Rosen tomorrow, the Paul Hill Chorale Sunday and guitarist Andres Segovia Monday.

In the Opera House, the Washington Opera will perform today through Wednesday and next Friday, with a benefit set Tuesday.

"In Praise of America: 1650-1830," an exhibition of 75 "exceptionally fine" examples of American furniture and decorative arts, may be seen through July 6 at the National Gallery of Art (6th street at Constitution avenue, N.W., 202-737-4215). "Wonders of the Age: Masterpieces of Early Safavid Painting," an exhibit of Sixteenth Century Persian works, will be displayed through March 2. "Italian Drawings from the Art Institute of Chicago" may be seen through March 7.

Clipped By:

famgolverdingen

Tue, Jan 7, 2020