

Weekend's Best Bets

If wagonering seems more rigorous than you had thought, there are easier ways to spend the time listed in On the Go, Pages 2-3, and even tougher methods of passing the weekend in Recreation Notes, Page 8. In the midst of it all, here are some selections of the house.

It was 22 years ago (count 'em) that Glenn Yarbrough, left, the finest boy soprano ever turned out by New York's Grace Church, took his now-tenor into a threesome called The Limelitters. The group has appeared only intermittently since breaking up in 1963, but Yarbrough, the voice, still as young and clear as spring, will be at Rasberry's in Angels Camp Saturday for two shows, 8 and 11. The evening before, incidentally, it will be Ramblin' Jack Elliott and Townes Van Zandt.

Up in the same neck of the woods this weekend is the 1981 Bear Valley Festival (off Ebbett's Pass Road, Rte. 4) that is opening a three-weekend season with Gilbert & Sullivan. See On the Go listing.

One of the nicest little fairs imaginable takes place this Sunday at the Bates School in Courtland, just south of Sacramento 20 miles on Highway 160. Pear Fair (10 a.m.-8 p.m.) celebrates the harvest of Bartletts. If you like pears or warm, small-town feeling, this is for you.

Another heart-warmer for a good cause is the SPCA Picnic and Mutt Show, Sunday from

Events

11 to 4 in McKinley Park, foot of Sacramento's Broadway. It's a benefit for the anti-animal cruelty society with doggie contests and plenty of food.

Six new films open tomorrow in Sacramento and local experts figure the best of them to be Brian de Palma's "Blow Out." The "Carrie" and "Dressed To Kill" director has John Travolta and Nancy Allen in this suspenser about a movie sound man who witnesses a peculiar death. At Arden Fair and the 49er.

"Eye of the Needle" looks good, too. It has Donald Sutherland in a thriller about a love-smitten Nazi spy. Friday at Tower and Birdcage Walk. The other four? See On the Go.
