Metro jail death suit amended

By DORREN KLAUSNITZER

The wife of a Pulaski, Tenn., man who died in jail after paramedics failed to detect a bullet wound has added six names to a federal lawsuit filed last year.

Kenneth Lancaster, 33, died in the Metro drunk tank April 5.

He was taken to the jail after emergency personnel and police responding to a distress call at 17th Avenue North and Cockrill Street found him lying in an alley.

He appeared intoxicated and complained that he had been shot. Emergency medical personnel examined him at the scene, but did not detect the bullet wound.

Lancaster was charged with public drunkenness and taken to the Metro Criminal Justice Center, where he later died of internal bleeding.

The emergency personnel later said they had found nothing when they checked Lancaster's leg and checked under his underwear where there was a rip in his pants. The dime-sized wound that caused no profuse external bleeding was later found in the fatty part of his waist at his beltline.

The lawsuit, filed by attorney Richard Dinkins for Lancaster's widow, Clara Jean Lancaster, previously sued Metro Government, emergency medical personnel Robert Zervas, Gene Ridley, Steven Anderson and James King, Metro Fire Chief Martin Coleman, Metro police officers John Lash and Marvin Keith, Sheriff's Department supervisor Wade Coffman and former Sheriff Fate Thomas.

The amended suit adds the names of Metro police Lt. Preston Perkeson, jail supervisors Darren Bracey, Richard Hudson and Lacey Murray and jail administrators Bobby Forster and Mike Hamm.

The lawsuit seeks $5 million in compensatory damages and $1 million in punitive damages.

Susan Short-Jones, Metro legal director, could not be reached for comment. ■

Singer's suit charges mismanagement

By KIRK LOGGINS
Staff Writer

Singer-songwriter Townes Van Zandt has charged in a lawsuit that Music Row accountant Robert Jerry Jackson has mishandled his finances since 1984.

Van Zandt and his wife, Jeanene Van Zandt, say in a lawsuit filed in Chancery Court that they went to Jackson in 1984 "for assistance in accounting matters, tax preparation and general business management."

The Van Zandts said Jackson took $40,000 from their bank account in January 1985 without their knowledge and used the money to repair the roof of an Alabama motel Jackson and his brother owned.

Jackson later deposited $47,400 in the Van Zandts' bank account and said it was for repayment of a loan, the lawsuit says.

The Van Zandts said Jackson forged Townes Van Zandt's signature on a $6,000 check in September 1984 and subsequently invested their funds, without their knowledge or consent, in a partnership called Mount Juliet Plaza Limited.

They also allege that Jackson failed to file a 1987 federal income tax return for them and "grossly overcharged" them for his accounting and management services between 1985 and 1989.

The Van Zandts are seeking an unspecified amount of compensatory damages and $500,000 in punitive damages. Their lawsuit was prepared by attorney Sawnie Aldredge.

Jackson, whose office is at 1103 18th Ave. S., said he has written authorization from Townes Van Zandt for all the investments mentioned in the lawsuit.

The accountant said the Van Zandts' 1987 federal income tax return was filed.

Responding to the allegation of overcharging for his services, Jackson said the singer-songwriter "forgot we paid for his medical insurance." ■
