

The Ken Gray Extension Entomology Slide Collection at Oregon State University

Ken Gray took many of the images presented on this site. Ken Gray was an entomologist at Oregon State University for many years and during his tenure compiled a large collection of photographs of insects and related arthropods. Ken Gray images can usually be identified by an index number such as "100-12" in the lower left corner. Ken Gray used primarily Kodak Kodacolor negative film that was copied onto duplicating slide film for projection. The original image collection of about 20,000 negatives resides in the OSU Entomology Department at present. Images may not be used without permission.

Ken Gray was a member of the OSU Entomology faculty 1931 - 1941.
